

Notes on Contributors

Jill Barton is a professor of legal writing and a lecturer in law at the University of Miami School of Law. She recently published So Ordered: The Writer's Guide for Aspiring Judges, Judicial Clerks, and Interns and previously coauthored The Handbook for the New Legal Writer. Before pursuing her legal career, she worked as a journalist for the Associated Press, publishing stories in The New York Times, The Washington Post, and The Miami Herald. In her undergraduate days, she founded and coedited Ox-Tales, a compilation of student-authored short stories, while studying at Oxford University's Keble College.

Mark Cohen is a lawyer and plain-language consultant whose 30-plus-year legal career has included work as an Air Force JAG, a special assistant U.S. attorney, a prosecutor, and a municipal judge. He taught legal writing at the University of Arkansas School of Law, chaired The Colorado Lawyer's editorial board, wrote six articles for American Jurisprudence, and authored two mysteries for Time Warner, including one Colorado Book of the Year finalist. His articles on nonlegal subjects have appeared in magazines such as Inside Kung Fu, Camping & RV, and Modern Dad.

George D. Gopen is professor emeritus of the practice of rhetoric at Duke University. He has authored 5 books and almost 60 articles on literary analysis, rhetorical analysis, teaching, and writing of all kinds — including legal, scientific, and mathematical. He is best known for having expanded the work begun by his Clearlines group into the Reader Expectation Approach — a radically new way of analyzing and controlling written English.

Joan L. Larsen is a justice of the Michigan Supreme Court. Before her appointment and subsequent election to the bench, she served on the faculty at the University of Michigan Law School and was special counsel to the dean. Before that, she served as a deputy assistant attorney general in the U.S. Department of Justice Office of Legal Counsel, was an attorney in Sidley & Austin's Washington, D.C., office, and clerked for U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia and U.S. Court of Appeals Judge David Sentelle.

Brian C. Potts is an Indiana attorney who serves as a law clerk to United States District Court Judge Joseph S. Van Bokkelen. In September, he'll begin clerking for Judge Daniel A. Manion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Adam L. Rosman is executive vice president and general counsel for First Data, where he oversees First Data's in-house attorneys and outside counsel, and manages all legal and regulatory matters. Before joining First Data, he served as general counsel for the Willis Group. He has served as an adjunct professor at Georgetown University Law Center.

Mark Sableman is a partner at Thompson Coburn LLP, in St. Louis, where he handles cases involving intellectual property, media, and information technology. He authored the book More Speech, Not Less: Communications Law in the Information Age and has received the International Trademark Association's Ladas Award and the Burton Award for Legal Achievement for several past articles. He has served as an adjunct professor at Washington University School of Law since 2001.

Kathleen Elliott Vinson directs the Legal Writing, Research, and Written Advocacy program at Suffolk University Law School, in Boston. She coauthored Legal Analysis: The Fundamental Skill. She has chaired the AALS Section on Legal Reasoning, Writing, and Research, and served as president of the Association of Legal Writing Directors. She is a former editor of The Legal Writing Institute's Monograph Series and The Second Draft. She also cofounded the New England Legal Writing Consortium.

Raymond P. Ward is special counsel at Adams & Reese LLP, in New Orleans, specializing in civil appeals. He contributed a chapter on Louisiana appellate practice to the ABA's Appellate Practice Compendium and coedited and contributed two chapters to the Defense Research Institute's A Defense Lawyer's Guide to Appellate Practice. Excerpts from two of his briefs are featured as exemplars in Bryan A. Garner's The Winning Brief.