

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Albert P. Blaustein is professor emeritus at Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey School of Law, in Camden.

Beverly Ray Burlingame, formerly the executive editor of Texas Law Review and a law clerk for the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, is now an associate with the Dallas law firm of Thompson & Knight.

Laura J. Cooper is a professor of law at the University of Minnesota.

Stephen F. Fink, who serves on the Plain-Language Committee of the State Bar of Texas, is a shareholder in the Dallas law firm of Thompson & Knight.

Bryan A. Garner is the president of LawProse, Inc., a Dallas-based group of legal-writing consultants. He teaches at Southern Methodist University School of Law.

George Hathaway, a lawyer with Detroit Edison Co., chairs the Michigan Bar's Plain English Committee.

Douglas Laycock holds the Alice McKean Chair in Law at The University of Texas. His most recent book, The Death of the Irreparable Injury Rule (Oxford, 1990), won the Scribes Book Award in 1991.

Nanneska Nall Magee, a 1991 graduate of The University of Texas School of Law, is an associate in the Dallas office of Conant Whittenburg Whittenburg & Schachter.

James D. Maugans is the associate director of the Office of Books with the American Law Institute – American Bar Association Committee on Continuing Professional Education in Philadelphia.

Roy M. Mersky is the Elton M. Hyder Centennial Professor of Law at The University of Texas, where he serves as Librarian and Director of Research.

Ron Moss, a 1991 graduate of The University of Texas School of Law, is a law clerk for Justice John Powers of the Texas Court of Appeals in Austin, Texas.

Francis M. Nevins is a novelist and professor of law at the Saint Louis University School of Law.

Christopher Simoni is the associate director for public services at Northwestern University Law Library.

Charles Alan Wright holds the William B. Bates Chair in Law at The University of Texas. During the 1990–1991 academic year, he was the Goodhart Professor in Legal Science at Cambridge University.

